Rabbit & Guinea Pig Feeding Pyramid

Ideally the diet of your pet rabbit or guinea pig should mimic that of their wild cousins, i.e. based on grass or hay which should always be available. This should be supplemented by vegetables, wild plants and herbs.

Welcome to the 100% natural way to feed and care for your rabbit and guinea pig's health and nutrition using natural hay, dried flowers and herbs - and advice on looking after your pet from John Burns BVMS MRCVS and the team at Burns Pet Nutrition Ltd.

Rabbits and guinea pigs fed on a hay and vegetable diet should be fed a variety of hay, herbs, vegetables and non-toxic wild plants. If the diet is varied then there may be no need for dried cereals, pellets, flaked food or any vitamin or mineral supplements. Dried cereals, pellets or flaked foods should never be suddenly cut out of the diet; any change in diet should be made gradually to avoid digestive upset. Changing diets suddenly can be fatal. These products are also suitable for Chinchillas
